Committee Reports

Stewardship/Finance - Stewardship/Finance Group provided a written summary prior to the meeting summarizing discussions over the last 4 months. Looking into initiating a SMS text group message for St. Paul stewardship opportunities or other high value notifications. This month the committee will be focusing on Spiritual Growth. Information will be forthcoming in The Pulse. Discussed compiling a summary of stewardship activities that occur across all of the St. Paul Council subcommittees to highlight the things St. Paul does every month to promote stewardship. The Council agreed that hopefully we can get back to meeting back in person and more regularly to better plan stewardship activities well into the year.

Grounds & Maintenance – Thank you to Fred for taking care of the air conditioner that was leaking in the CEC building. Fred and Colin are working on fixing the floor in that room. Jason also replaced light bulbs in several of the outside lights.

The motion from Tom Sabotta was that $750 would go to the prison ministry and $500 would go to Lutheran Services. Angie Coyle second the motion. Ayes Carry.

Nancy Stout is overseeing this hiring process.

Psalm 130:5

I wait for the Lord,
my whole being waits,
and in his word I put my hope.

Introduction: In today's gospel Jesus reveals his power over death by raising Lazarus from the dead. The prophet Ezekiel prophesies God breathing new life into dry bones. To those in exile or living in the shadows of death, these stories proclaim God's promise of resurrection. In baptism we die with Christ that we might also be raised with him to new life. At the Easter Vigil the church will welcome the newly baptized as we remember God's unfailing promise in our baptism.

First Reading: The Book of the Jewish Prophet Ezekiel 37:1-14 NIV

Ezekiel was speaking to the people of Israel after they had seen Jerusalem sacked (about 587 BCE), their Temple destroyed, and the nation's citizens taken into exile by the leaders of Babylon. The people were growing in despair and were beginning to doubt their survival. Ezekiel had tried to lift their spirits and remind them they are God's chosen people by making dire predictions against those nations that rejoiced at Jerusalem's fall.

But now, Ezekiel turns to words of encouragement in sermons that project new and renewed forms of life for the Hebrew community. The people with hope will be led from their experience of death in the desert to new life in the land of Israel. 'Dem dry bones will be reassembled, and the people of Israel will be freed from the bonds of the grave (separation from Jerusalem) to form a new political existence. The Jewish understanding of "resurrection" was corporate, not individual, and would be experienced in the restoration of the nation. According to Ezekiel, Yahweh God is faithful, merciful, and life-giving. The same spirit that was present at the creation of the world, RUACH, God's life-giving breath, would recreate faithful Israel as the Chosen People.

Psalm 130 NIV

Second Reading: Paul's Letter to the Christian Community in Rome 8:6-11 NIV

This reading contains a straightforward answer from Paul to the early Jewish Christians who wanted to know why the Mosaic Law under which they had lived was not enough to achieve holiness in God's Kingdom. Paul drew on the Jewish tradition to show that while the spirit of God was constantly trying to guide the people, the flesh was really too weak to follow well. The false human spirit even under the law could not sustain righteousness with God.

In this statement, the influence of Greek dualism makes Paul's argument sound incredibly confrontational. In it, he likens "the flesh" to death, darkness, matter, and not of God's realm. In contrast, the things of "the spirit" are ethereal, pure, freeing, and Godly. It is a stronger way of saying what the Jewish people had lived under for many centuries: the human being is caught in the middle of a battle between good and evil spirits/demons/influences/temptations. These external influences form the ego and false self that manifest in selfishness, hypocrisy, and divisive behavior. Each day, a person has to decide which spirit will lord over him or her that day.

And so, according to Paul, when Christians were asked which spirit would reign, they would answer "the good Spirit." In his understanding this was the same power or force that raised Jesus.

The believer comes into contact with the Spirit by living in union with Christ; a union that is pronounced and ratified in baptism. Holy Spirit does not demand that we disdain the flesh or mortal body, but rather recreates and vitalizes the carnate so that we can shed the false self and live in accord with God's will.

Gospel: John 11: 3-7, 17, 20-27, 33b-45 NIV

How will you finally respond to the invitation to follow Jesus, and what will it take to convince you that the Kingdom of God is at hand?

The raising of Lazarus from the dead is the seventh miracle Jesus performs in John's gospel. Since seven is the number of perfection in Hebrew numerology, this act can be seen as the greatest of Jesus' wondrous signs, and the immediate cause of his death. As you listen to this story, keep in mind that Jesus' actions are motivated by a tremendous love for Martha, Mary, and Lazarus, and complete trust in his Father. It is reflective of the loving relationship Abba ("Dad") had with his Son who also was about to lose his mortal life. In this Bethany scene on the hilltop across from mighty Jerusalem, we glimpse the fullness of Jesus' humanity when he wept, and the incredible power of God working through him at the tomb. Like a good first-born son, we see Jesus engaged in the work of his Father. Jesus speaks {"Lazarus, come out!"} and it immediately happens, which is reminiscent of the power in God's words as the world was created.

It is significant that when Lazarus finally comes out of the tomb in response to Jesus' summoning that there is work for the community to do. Jesus tells those nearby, "Unbind him, and let him go free!" God's power gives life, but John wants his community to know that freedom can be sustained by their cooperation. They too, like God in their own history, are called to free others from what binds them or holds them in the dark.

There is also an important exchange between Jesus and Martha concerning resurrection. When Martha tells Jesus that she believes her brother will rise again on the last day, she is referring to Ezekiel's understanding of a corporate reestablishment of the faithful people under a freed Israel. But Jesus changes the concept of resurrection. No longer does that promise refer only to the Jews. Jesus makes resurrection possible for anyone who believes in him because the power that he manifests is God's power and there are no limits or national boundaries or set of rules that can contain it. All who believe will live forever in the Spirit of God as part of the New Israel. This life eternal is not a resuscitated mortal body but rather a body transformed and glorious. It is a person existing in the loving embrace of God.

There could be no better message for John's gospel community. In their minds, they were transforming the lifeless Israel by bringing former enemies into communion: Samaritans, Jews, and Gentiles who believed in Jesus as God's Messiah. Their belief was fostered by Jesus' use of the phrase "I Am" to show his participation in the great name, Yahweh, which means, I AM Who Am. For John's followers, Jesus is God incarnate, and Holy Spirit (breath) gives life to the community of believers. Belief in Jesus is complete when it helps people to accept physical death because of a sure and certain confidence in life beyond this present state. Those who believe in Jesus never die.

Taking it home:

Jesus summoned the community to unbind Lazarus and let him go free. Is there someone whom the Lord is asking you to unbind and free? {Let go of a grudge, tutor, get counseling, tell a child "I love you," point out someone's good qualities, be less judgmental, give a back rub or foot massage....}

Pray seven times today: "Come, Holy Spirit."

Describe a time you saw someone brought back to life.

When you struggle to face sin and do the loving thing, do you look to God in prayer or to others for support? Or do you prefer to try to "do it myself?"

How is your faith stronger today than when you first believed? Or are you still waiting to be able to say, "I believe!" Do one thing in the coming weeks to create space for greater belief.

Who loves you most in this world, and how do you know?

Put the Paschal Mystery into your own words.

Mindfulness (set aside five minutes. breathe and read through three times. Which words or ideas hold energy for you? What images and feelings emerge in your imagination?) "So get ready for a great adventure, the one you were really born for. If we never get to our little bit of heaven, our life does not make much sense, and we have created our own "hell." So get ready for some new freedom, some dangerous permission, some hope from nowhere, some unexpected happiness, some stumbling stones, some radical grace, and some new and pressing responsibility for yourself and for our suffering world." — Richard Rohr, Falling Upward: A Spirituality for the Two Halves of Life

We praise you, O God, for redeeming the world through our Savior Jesus Christ.
